High Court Refuses to Hear Suit Of Widow of a Heavy Smoker

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (Reuters).—The United States Supreme Court refused today to hear a lawsuit by a widow who claimed heavy smoking killed her husband through lung cancer. The court's refusal to consider the appeal of Mrs. Edwin Green ended her 13-year attempt to collect $1.5 million from the American Tobacco Co.

Every United States cigarette maker had a stake in the case because if Mrs. Green had collected even a fraction of what sho demanded thousands of other liability suits would have followed. Although the jury in the first of two trials in a U.S. district court found Mr. Green's smoking of up to 60 cigarettes a day over 30 years was the "proximate cause" of his death from lung cancer, it found the company could not reasonably have been expected to know smoking could cause this. The tobacco company also won in the second trial.

"the father, I understand, is in a bit of shock." Contacted at the home of his wife's parents, Mr. Kienast commented, "You wouldn't happen to have five new names handy would you? I can tell you one thing, we're going to be needing a lot more house pretty soon."

More than 50 cases of quintuplet births have been recorded in this century but in only five cases have all the children survived

Normal odds on a quintuplet birth are one in 34,934,656, according to the American Medical Association. But these figures are being affected by the use of fertility drugs.

While Blondie takes care of the figures and Virginie looks after the production line, the designing load rests on Sara's shoulders. An exotic girl with intense black eyes and long black hair. Sara is an unusual case of a designer who can do ample credit to her creations.

Her fashion policy is simple. It calls for a minimum of seams for a maximum effect. One of her best-sellers consists of a couple of silk triangles, tied around the neck and gathered around the waist with a belt. The Irascible Master of a Minuscule Domain

By Jon Winroth PARIS.—Feb. 25.—At the corner of Rue de Sevres and Rue des Saints-Pères is a tiny, neon-lit café indistinguishable from any other corner bistro. Despite this, it is regularly jammed by a clientele of pretty shop girls and their bosses from the dress stores on the Rue de Sevres, floor managers from the nearby Bon Marche department store, restaurent owners, various luminaries of stage, screen and the National Assembly and a scruffy assortment of journatists, artists and the like

Au Sauvignon is not necessarily the nearest place to get a drink for any of these people, because the quartier is full of cafes. Nor is it the attraction of the salesgirls. There are plenty of good-looking girls in

Once inside Au Sauvignon the secret is out. Paintings of wine cellars, vineyards and goodnaturedly erotic vintage scenes announce that the owner serves good wine rather than the stuff that in most cases has turned. the French to beer. The luminaries could be wrong, but when complexion and figure-conscious girls drink wine, you may be sure it is good.

Son of Auvergne

But they don't all drink it. Some ask for Coca-Cola, which the owner refuses to sell to male adults. Here lies the real answer to Au Sauvignon's success—Henri Vergne, a loyal and typical son of Auvergne and a flerce individualist, itself an Auvergnat characteristic. Alternately charming and irascible, he is the absolute master of his minuscule domain.

It is he who chooses the wines and he who challenges his customers to contradict his claim that he has "the best The only thing to do when fac-ed with this outrageous if nearly justifiable assertion is to agree meekly.

When she was serving in the Congo she found she could not lug the heavy bags of visiting dignitaries. She made a deal: "I traded off with the man. If he'd go to the airport, I'd write one of his reports."

Some women find other women a problem.

"In science there is discrimination against women. Some comes from the women themselves. It's too bad, but true." says Dr. B. Jean Apgar, a research chemist for the Department of Agriculture laboratory at Ithaca, N.Y.

"If anything, I think the women doctors reacted a little bit more against me," said Dr. Valerija B. Raulinaitis, chief of staff at the Veterans Administration Hospital, Downey, Ill.

Mrs. Naomi Rosen Sweeney, a fiscal economist with the Budget Bureau, says she is very encouraged at the number of young women professionals being recruited by government. "Time will tell how they progress." Mrs. Sweeney says. "but it looks like things are opening up as they hadn't years ago: when I began." She sees more discrimination in promotion

"I don't think about it," said Dr. Margaret Pittman, of the National Institutes of Health. "I always find if you do your job probably twice as well as men you move shead If I

"Nurses have been slow to stand up and speak for themselves about what they can do as far as professional ability and to put a pricetag on it," she said. him it would be just another pleasant place to drink good

Mr. Vergne does not permit coffee to be drunk from 11 a.m. until after lunch, nor during most of the rest of the day. Wine is the only drink fit to accompany his remarkable sandwiches, and he frequently invites those who prefer beer or soft drinks to take their business elsewhere.

His cellar is sacred and only a very privileged few have ever set foot in it. When he descends into this forbidden precinct, nothing will bring him out until he is ready.

Once, as he was busy cleaning and putting things into order behind the bar, two customers entered, deep in discussion. Mr. Vergne continued his work as they kept up their conversation. Eventually he backed down the stairs into the cellar.

Several minutes later the talk subsided and was followed by thirsty banging on the counter. After a brief pause, a muffled roar came up from the cellar: "While I was up there, all you wanted to do was talk. Now that I'm down here, you want to be served. Go to hell!" And this is precisely what keeps his customers coming back.

Terrorism Against Israel

There is nothing pretty about either side is disavowed loses most of its terrorizing of the quasi-war between Egypt and Israel, or the general state of hostilities or near hostilities in the region. But the Arab terrorism against Israel is, of course, of another order-despicable, degrading, contemptible in its indiscrimination between innocents and combatants, and, finally, desperately dangerous in the emotions it stirs and the reprisais it invites. This is all so obvious that it hardly needs reiteration, even in the face of the latest outrages—the blowing up of a Swissair plane, with 47 killed, and the near-miss of an Austrian plane, not to mention the bombing of a tourist bus in the Holy Land.

It becomes even more difficult to know what can usefully be said when the villains of this tragedy are so remote from effective international influence or pressure or control. It is all very well to talk about Arab terrorism, and that is in one sense what it is—that is what all the circumstantial evidence points to-but it is less easy to know how to proceed from there. In theory. Arab governments should be held accountable for letting terror groups operate within their territory. In practice, there is at least some reason to question whether the governments in question can exercise effective control, with even the best willwhich is itself questionable. The issue was a little simpler when the Arab commando groups were freely taking credit for those atrocities, but now they are disavowing a hand in the latest air crashes and while this proves nothing, it may at least suggest that the commandos themselves may sense that they have gone too far. Terror which effect and therefore much of its purpose. If the leaders of these commando movements are no longer prepared to take public credit for these acts, it might mean that they have concluded that they are doing their cause more harm than good.

But we cannot, of course, count on that, from men who have amply demonstrated their readiness to play this kind of grisly game with human life. The real answershort of some ultimate resolution of the Arab-Israeli conflict-must lie in some concerted international effort to improve security in the air while simultaneously bringing pressure on the Arab governments, especially Syria, Jordan and Lebanon, to take greater responsibility for what goes on within their countries or originates from them; it may be that they can never stamp out the terrorist movements entirely or that they might not find some other havens. But the Arab governments should be expected to try harder than they have.

In the meantime, the shutting off of airmail and air freight deliveries to Israel by nine major European airlines is only valid as a temporary measure, while security is reassessed and improved. To penalize Israel in any permanent way is to put a premium on terror tactics. It is up to the international community, working in concert, to find a better way, not just for Israel's sake, vital as that is, or for the sake of promoting the safety of international air routes everywhere, important as that is, but for the sake of preventing the Arab-Israeli conflict, nasty as it now is, from getting even

Another Vietnam?

The rout of Lactian forces, strongly supported by American airpower, in the Plaine des Jarres poses a serious test for the Nixon Doctrine of limited United States overseas involvement. It lends urgency to congressional efforts to define the limits of American involvement in that small but strategic state on the borders of Vietnam.

The Communist thrust in Lacs, said to be spearheaded by some 16,000 North Victnamese troops, is clearly in violation of the Geneva accords of 1962. But United States activities in Laos, still shrouded in official secrecy, are also of questionable legitimacy, The United States-inspired Laotian offensive last fall into an area long held by the Communists practically assured the current counteroffensive.

The precipitous withdrawal of the highly touted army of Meo tribesmen who seized the plain last fall underscores the danger involved in over-reliance by the United States on the capacity of American-trained and equipped native troops to take over basic combat responsibility in Southeast Asia. The reason for this is fairly clear. Israel is surrounded by enemies that have tried to destroy it and they refuse its offers of a-cease-fire. Neither the United Nations nor the Big Four have come up with a satisfactory formula for

Boasting the country's single biggest fund-raising dinner the Minnesotans asked for President Nixon himself to address the 1970 affair. They were informed that the President would not be available for such functions but the Vice-President would. With some

Liberals' Boycott

Even after Agnew's barn-burning polemics in New Orleans and Des Moines last autumn transformed him into the country's premier political attraction, the liberal Republican establishment in the Twin Cities area still sulked. Some notethe dimer.

But from the grass roots (in the Twin Cities and especially in outstate Minnesota) the excitement was intense. Although party leaders in the past had trouble giving away $100 tickets bought in blocks by fat cats, demand exceeded supply this year for the first time. An unprecedented capacity crowd of nearly 9,000 at St. Paul Auditorium was assured. That was the situation late last week when Agnew suddenly sent word he would not fulfill his commitment to appear at a reception of the Minnesota Elephants Club ($500-and-up contributors) because of undefined duties. Furthermore, in response to pleas that Agnesi Agnew sides replied that even they shudder.

After Agnew's plane arrived at last Priday night. Minnesota party nicative answers to two questions from the assembled press and then hurried to more than six hours of seclusion at the Sheraton-Ritz Hotel in Minneapolis. Contributors to the Elephants Club were enraged to discover him absent from their reception and were not mollified by explanations from state chairman George Thiss about the Vice-President's tight schedule. Finally, without explanation or apology, Agnew turned up an hour late at the dinner,

The Vice-President did somewhat modify his pulse-quickening rhetoric to suit the bland Minnesota temper-but not enough for party leaders. Seeking the youth for Rep. Clark MacGregor in his uphill Senate race against Hubert H. Humphrey, they wanted a positive tone about campus dissent. Instead, Agnew was as negative as meet with the Elephants Club. But the vast majpority of the elated thousands at St. Paul Auditorium were oblivious to such highlevel rancor. When the Vice-President attacked the Chicago conspiracy defendants as "societal misfits" and accused leading Demo-crats of, "a weird desire to suck up the political support of organized dissidents," the crowd cheered what it had come to hear.

It provided counterpoint to the present sinking sensation of liberal Republican leaders, that they are losing touch with their constituency over Mayor Charles Stenvig of Minneapolis, the former police detective elected last year as a lawand-order independent. Rank-andfile Republicans are unhappy over the rejection of Stenvig's rightwing appointees by the Republicancontrolled city council and are urging the co-option of Stenvig as a Republican. Stenyig, not surprisingly, is a public admirer of Spiro T. Agnew. Minnesota Republican leaders, consequently, see themselves out-flanked by Agnew-Stenvig populism. If the movement is strong here, they reason, it must be so intense elsewhere that President Nixon could not keep Agnew off the 1972. ously no better security for Israel than in its own indomitable will and military strength and skill, but it acts as if time were on its side, as if it can control military. power and avoid miscalculation, and these assumptions are at least open to debate.

There is no reason for supposing that the Soviet Union, with all its strategic interest in the Eastern Mediterranean and all its historic ambitions in the Middle East, is likely to do less to keen the Arab war going than it did for Hanol. It cannot be taken for granted that Moscow will conair defense against low flying Israeli planes and allow Egypt and Soviet arms to be bombed at will.

Gen. Dayan has demonstrated that the Arab nations have no iefense against his air strikes. Mrs. Meir has said that she wants to make clear to the Egyptian people that President Na left them defenseless and that he has been lying to them, and this has clearly been demonstrated.

But again, it does not necessarily follow from this that the bombing will break the will of the Arab peoples or overthrow Nasser or drive him into direct negotiations with the Israeli government. In fact, the evidence so far in Egypt as in Vietnam is that the bombing may be counterproductive. It may weaken the Ecvotian war effort but it also enrages and humiliates both the Arabs and the Soviets and makes Nasser all the more determined not to negotiate on Israeli or Amer-

It is clear that the Arabs asked for this sort of thing by breaking the cease-fire, but it is at least open to question whether this sort of war can go on interminably on the present basis without some ghastly miscalculation or some new effort to break the strain and the diplomatic stalemate.

The military and diplomatic situations are not getting better, but worse. The Arabs are not only organizing guerrilla armies, which are more extreme than the regular Arab governments, but the guerrillas are beginning to use terror on the airlines trading with Israel and carrying the war into the cities of Europe.

Angry With France

It is easy to understand the anger of the Israeli officials and their supporters in the United States over the sale of French fighter planes to Libys, especially since Nasser already thousand troops in Libva.

This situation is not improved. however, by demonstrations against President Pompidou, led by some pro-Israeli organizations, or by the d manners of Mayor Lindsay of New York and Mayor Daley of Chicago, in refusing to receive Pompidou.

The main result of this is probably to hurt Israel rather France, and precisely at the time when the Israeli government is trying to get support in this country for more Phantom fighterbombers to carry on the war.

Nothing is less popular in this country after the Vietnam perience than political demonstrations and more American adventures in overseas wars and probably the only way to make things more complicated for the Israeli government is to add the complications of our politics to the complications of politics in Israel and the Arab states.

With the rise of the commando organizations after the six-day war, the problem Israel had to worry about was the attitude of the 300,000 or so Arabs who had remained in the country since the 1948 war of independence. Would they join hearts and hands with the Palestinian fedaveen outside the borders and constitute themselves into a maquis, a fifth column? Speaking Hebrew, knowing the country, able to move in his daily affairs without arousing suspicion, each Israeli Arab who conspired with the fedayeen would constitute 20 times the threat of anyone working from the outside.

REUTERS BRINGS WALL STREET TO YOU

To find out what's happening on Wall Street you could fly to New York and back. For the same cost you can have a month's subscription to Reuters Wall Street Printer.

WSP brings every important development on Wall Street right into your office. When Wall Street closes it carries U.S. out-of-hours news and reports from markets in Europe, Australia, South Africa and Japan.

Wherever U.S. investment news is made, you know about it immediately. You wouldn't if you went to Wall Street. WSP is edited and produced in New York and used throughout the United States. The facts you want aren't hidden in a mass of irrelevant words: every item is concise and to the point.

You can have WSP on a high-speed teleprinter or a Videoscan television monitor. It gives vital background detail when you use it in conjunction with the Stockmaster price retrieval system.

Call your nearest Reuters office for more facts. It's quicker than a trip to the States.

A two-day seminar for those who ask:

"Should we start a mutual fund?" "Or buy an existing fund?"

And for those who have already made the decision and ask:

"Are we doing it right?"

That's not an easy question to answer by yourself. Or within your own company. You need some outside advice. That is the purpose of the Chancel-lor/Lipper Seminar on mutual fund organization.

The speakers will include Robert Sprinkel, who started Competitive Capital Corporation, and the man who decided to buy it—Irwin Solomon, President of The Seaboard Corporation.

Arthur Lipper, who keeps score, will talk about performance and Arthur Underhill, the Dean of the industry, will tell you how to appraise a management company. (If you already have a mutual fund, two days at this seminar will help you evaluate how well it is doing.)

David Ehlers of Gibraltar will discuss "Load vs. No-Load." Stanley Goldblum of Equity Funding, and Jerome Hunsaker of Colonial will compare sales organizations.

Specialists in shareholder record keeping and government regulations will help you keep out of

Bill Pettit, Aki Yamada and Jerry Randolph will talk about portfolio management, and Robert Gersky, of IBDA, INC. will discuss "Third Market"

The registration fee is deductible, as are transportation and other expenses. Enrollment is limited to encourage participation in the discussions.

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

When two promising lines of play suggest themselves, it may not be easy to decide which to adopt, especially in a tournament, when overtricks are a consideration. This was South's problem on the diagramed deal

When South opened one spade West made a pre-emptive jump to three clubs, effectively crowding the auction for North.

North rejected the natural bid of three diamonds, which would perhaps have led the partnership to the excellent small slam contract available in that suit, in the interests of showing that his clubs were good enough to play no-trump.

As it happens, three no-trump would have resulted in a good score. The game could not have been defeated and North would have made at least 11 tricks unless East was inspired to lead a spade m the face of South's opening bid.

Naturally enough, no-trump did not appeal to South, who retreated to four hearts, ending the auction. West led a club and South had to choose between two plans: crossruffing or making use of dummy's diamonds.

Playing diamonds seemed to offer prospects of making 12 tricks, so South won the first trick with the club ace in dummy and cashed his ace and king of hearts.

The bad heart division was a blow, but not a totally unexpected one. Leaving the heart queen as a later entry to the dummy, South led to the diamond queen. East won after some hesitation, and played the club king to force South to ruff.

This did not hurt the de clarer at all. He ruffed and continued diamonds. East ruffed the third round of diamonds and played his last club, but South was in control. He ruffed, led to heart queen, and made the last three tricks with dummy's

TO put it one way: this is a chronicle of the Buendia family, whose successive generations have lived and died in a mythical Latin-American town called Macondo, and its framework is a family tree (printed at the front of the book) which shows that the astounding progenitor José Arcadio Buendia married Ursula Iguarán and thus produced Colonel Aure-liano Buendia (who married Remedios Moscote), that José Arcadio married Rebeca, and that out there on a limb of her own—Amaranta married nobody at all.

But this extraordinary novel obliterates the family tree in a prose jungle of overwhelming magnificence, even to the extent of only infrequently letting the people talk in their own right. I haven't read this Colombian author in his native Spanish, but Gregory Rabassa's translation is a triumph of fluent, gravid momentum, all stylishness and commonsensical virtuosity.

Above all, Garcia Marquez (via his translator) feeds the mind's eye non-stop, so much so that you soon begin to feel that never has what we superficially call the surface of life had so many corrugations and configurations, so much bewilderingly impacted detail, or men so many grandiose movements and tics, so many bizarre stances and airs. So I find it odd that the blurb points to "the simplicity, ease, and purity" of Garcia Mârquez's writing while a quot-ed review of his previous book. "No One Writes to the Colonel," mentions its "serenity" and "understatement." That's like calling a mammoth a moth. Let it be said at once that, although this man's sentences are immaculately built, the vision they contain is violent and lurid enough to make the works of two better-known Latin-Americans. J. L. Borges and Julio Cortázar, look (respectively) mincing and pretty.

Take Garcia Márquez at his

"He soid everything, even the tame jaguar that teased pas-sers-by from the courtyard of his house, and he bought an eternal ticket on a train that never stopped traveling. In the postcards that he sent from the way stations he would describe with shouts the instantaneous images that he had seen from the window of his coach, and it was as if he were tearing up and throwing into oblivion some long, evanescent poem: the chimerical Negroes in the cotton fields of Louisiana, the winged horses in the bluegrass of Kentucky, the Greek lovers in the infernal sunsets of Arizons, the girl in the red sweater painting watercolors by a lake in Michigan who waved at him with her brushes ...

It's a prose that's always controlled, but it expresses a vision full of lunges, spurts, mild or maniacal hallucinations, preternatural heavings and bulging gargoyles. Tracing the growth of Macondo-from jungle village into a town served by a railroad and then into ghost

Richie Allen a Holdout

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (AP) .-Richie Alllen's asking price and Ken Harrelson's ears have been lowered considerably—giving the St. Louis Cardinals a dubious gain of $15,000 and Harrelson's barber a solid wind for all of $15. Allen's salary impasse with the Cardinals, who liberated him from Philadelphia last fall in the Curt Flood trade, was lessened somewhat yesterday when the controversial slugger reduced his original demand of $155,000 to $140,000.

Harrelson, meanwhile, arrived in the Cleveland Indians' camp at Tucson, Ariz., and was immediately offered an option: have his shoulder-length tresses trimmed or face a $1,000 fine. "I figure I saved myself $985," cracked Hawk after shelling out $15 to a hair stylist. "It's probably the best investment I ever made. Harrelson, beginning the second year of a two-year contract, passed manager Alvin Dark's post-haircut inspection and joined his teammates in the club's first full-scale workout, conducted without unsigned first baseman Tony Horton.

A History of Pollution

WASHINGTON. — Everyone talks about water pollution, but no one seems to know who started it. The history of modern water pollution in the United States dates back to Feb. 28, 1931, when Mrs. Frieda

But what Mrs. Holbrook didn't know was that after the water was drained from the tub, it emptied into the sewer. which emptied into the Blue Sky River, killing two fish.

Three years later Mrs. Murphy leaned over the fence and said to Mrs. Eolbrook, "It's none of my business, but are you still using that Formula Cake soap?"

Mrs. Holbrook used the Klonk and the next time her husband put on his shirt he remarked, "How on earth did you get the collar clean?"

"That's my secret." said Mrs. Holbrook, and then she whispered to no one in particular, "and Mrs. Murphy's."

But unbeknownst to Mrs. Holbrook, the water from Klonk Soap Chips prevented any fish downstream from hatching

Four years later, Mrs. Murphy was hanging up her shirts and Mrs. Holbrook said, "How did you ever get your cuffs so white, surely not with Klonk?" "Not ordinary Klonk," Mrs. Murphy said. "But I did with Super Fortified Klonk with the XLP additive. You see, Super Fortified Klonk attacks dirt and destroys it. Here, try some on your shirts." Mrs. Holbrook did and discovered her husband's shirt cuffs turned pure white. What she couldn't possibly know was that it turned the river water pure white as well. The years went by, and poor Mrs. Murphy died. Her daughter-in-law took over the house, Mrs. Holbrook noticed how the daughter-in-law always used to sing as she hung up her wash. "Why do you always sing?" asked Mrs. Holbrook. "Because of this new Dynamite detergent. It literally dynamites my clothes clean, Here, try it, and then let's go to a movie, since Dynamite detergent takes the drudgery out of washing," Six months later the Blue Sky River was declared a health hazard. Finally, last year Mrs. Murphy's daughter-in-law called over to Mrs. Eolbrook, "Have you heard about Zap the enzyme giant killer?"

A few days later, as Mr. Holbrook was walking home from work, he accidentally fell into the Blue Sky River, swallowed a mouthful of water and died immediately. At the funeral services the minister said, "You can say anything you want about Holbrook, but no one can deny he had the cleanest shirts in town."

Stern Image In Elizabeth's New Portrait

By Alvin Shuster

LONDON, Feb. 25 (NYT).—A controversial new portrait of Queen Elizabeth II, showing her unsmiling with marks under her lip and on her left ear, was unveiled here today.

The queen, who gave the artist, Pietro Annigoni, 18 sittings, attended ceremo-nies at the National Portrait Gallery today to view the finished product along with hundreds of invited guests. The stark painting, which goes on public display tomorrow, drew such comments "atrocious," "unflattering," "unfair" and at best "interesting."

Mr. Annigoni, who painted a rather idealized portrait of the queen 15 years ago, said he expected a lively debate over the new effort. He explained that "people change over 15 years and the queen is no exception.

"She is a more mature person today." he said. "My problem was to try to blend the human being and the symbol. Besides the artist really tries to reflect himself. I do not paint for the public or even the client. I try to satisfy myself."

Queen Satisfied

The Italian artist, whose first royal portrait brought him fame, apparently managed to satisfy the queen as well with the stern image developed over a period of ten months. He said she often rose from her chair in the Yellow Drawing Room in Buckingham Palace to come over and look at his progress.

"I can't say what her comments were," the artist said. "But I did not want to paint her as a film star. I think that nowadays it is much easier to be serious there are so many reasons for being sad. My view of the monarch is that I see and feel her as a very lonely person." The queen does give the impression of being lonely, unhappy, aged and proud in the portrait, which pictures her stand-ing against a dawn sky in the red robes of the sovereign of the Order of the British Empire. Crowns and jewels have been omitted. Her only ornament is the Star of the Order of the Garter.

"Sorry your majesty," said The Evening News here today. "If this is what we, your subjects, have done to you in 15 years I can only apologize deeply-and resolve to do better in future. As Annigoni's chocolate box monarch of 28, you were gay, confident and full of life. his new portrait, all the joy seems to have gone.

The artist explained that the mark on the queen's lower lip. which is likely to cause comment among Britons, accurately reflects a royal blemish. He said he toned down the mark in recent days as well as those on the left ear, which appear as strands of hair. The marks, however, are still noticeable.

Mr. Annigoni, who has now painted six portraits of the royal family and is not known for his humility, also placed the initials A.M.C.A. on the right shoulder silk. He explained those are the initials of his late wife.

The painting, executed mostly in oil and tempera on a canvas 78 inches by 70 inches, did win praise by Dr. Roy Strong, the flamboyant director of the National Portrait Gallery, who originally asked the queen to sit for the painting. He said. "It is a terrific tob in an age of vanishing monarchies and I think it is destined to be a famous picture."

After the queen agreed to Dr. Strong's request, the portrait was commissioned by Hugh Leggatt, a London art dealer. who paid the artist $4.800 and presented the painting to the National Gallery. located behind the British Museum near Trafalgar Square. The artist said he agreed to the low fee because he loves England

"I think anything new is bound to receive critical controversy," Mr. Leggatt said. 'But I am delighted with it for it does very much for the dignity of this country. It is very majestic. There certainly have been remarks that she is looking severe and I think this is very
